

Conjuring Clarity — Your Vision

What is your vision?

Your vision for your book is different from your goals for your book. If you did the “WHY/because” exercise enough times on the Your Writing Goals worksheet, you may be close to your vision. Or maybe you already realized it.

On this Your Vision Worksheet, take some time to write deeply and introspectively about what you envision your book DOING in the world. What kind of change will it create – both in the world and in your life?

For example:

- Do you imagine it becoming a bestselling novel that helps people delve deep into their imagination and come out the other side of your story feeling transformed??
- Do you imagine hearing from your readers about how your book, story, method/program has changed their lives?
- Do you imagine doing a book tour and readings? (Can you see yourself signing books for your readers afterward?)
- Do you imagine your speaking engagements increasing exponentially, and therefore, your client base and revenue stream, as well?

Think wild and think big.

To complete this worksheet, do the following.

- Carve out some time (at least an hour).
- Make sure you create the space you need to focus. Find a time when you can be alone and will not be interrupted by exterior noise (as best as you possibly can).
- Sit in a place that allows you to daydream (this is a very important part of being able to write at will!). Stare out the window or close your eyes.
- Let your imagination take over.

No dream is too big.
